Delegated Decision – Local Development

This Leaflet Contains Important Advice

Your Planning Permission is in two parts:

The Decision Notice and the approved plans.

The Decision Notice may contain conditions. These conditions will tell you:

The time you have to begin the development before the permission expires, and in some cases the order in which certain aspects of the development should proceed.

Conditions can also override details shown on the approved plans. It is therefore essential that your contractor works from a copy of the approved plans, and has a copy of the Decision Notice showing any conditions.

If you have obtained a Building Warrant, you must check that the approved Building Warrant plans are the same as, or take account of your Planning Permission.

Conditions will only have been imposed on your Planning Permission because they are necessary and reasonable. The reasons will be stated. You should contact the appropriate area office if any condition causes you concern, or if you need clarification on what is required.

It is your responsibility to ensure that the development is completed in accordance with the approved details. Developments are monitored by the planning authority to ensure that this is the case.

Failure to complete the development in accordance with the approval could result in the planning authority taking enforcement action.

If permission to develop land is granted subject to conditions the owner may, in certain circumstances, serve on the planning authority a purchase notice if they are able to claim that by virtue of the decision the land has become incapable of 'reasonably beneficial use' in its existing state. The detailed procedures to be followed in respect of the planning purchase notices is set out in Part 5 of the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Act 1997.

Change of Plans

You must not depart from the approved plans or the conditions of your Planning Permission, without first seeking the permission of the planning authority. If your conditions set out the order in which the development should proceed, you must follow that order unless the planning authority has agreed otherwise.

Some minor departures or variations from the approved plans can be treated as being 'non-material'. The planning authority may decide that more substantial departures or variations have a 'material' impact on the development.

An application to alter part(s) of an approved development must be made by the original applicant, or a person acting with that person's consent, on the enclosed 'Non-Material Variation' form.

Once a decision has been reached by the planning authority, you will be sent a letter that will inform you whether your application has been accepted as a non-material variation. If the variation is material you will have to make a new application for Planning Permission before you can proceed further with this aspect of the development.

There is no statutory right of appeal in respect of the decision of the planning authority, which is the sole judge as to whether a change to a proposal is material.

Rights of Review

If you feel aggrieved by any of the planning conditions which have been imposed you may require the planning authority to review the case under section 43A of the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Act 1997 as amended.

The "notice of review" requires to be on a form obtained from Planning Services, Dumfries and Galloway Council and served on the Local Review Body of the planning authority within three months of the date of the Decision Notice.

As an alternative to requiring a review of the case, you may apply to the Council to have conditions varied or set aside. Planning staff at your area office will be pleased to discuss this with you if so desired.

Post Decision Notice

You require to submit to the planning authority a Notification of Initiation of Development before works commence on site and Notification of Completion of Development when works are complete. In addition, a Notice of Development in Progress requires to be displayed on site for specific types of development (national and major developments and developments which may have impacts over a wider area). To assist the planning authority have prepared pro-forma notices for your use and these are attached to the decision notice.

Other Permissions Required

You must satisfy yourself that you have all the necessary permissions before starting work. Planning permission alone may not entitle you to start the development.

It is probable that you will also need a building warrant. If in doubt, contact your area office for advice before proceeding. Ask to speak to the Building Standards officer who deals with your area.

Other permissions which you may need include:

- A road opening permit, or road construction consent from the Council as Roads Authority.
- A discharge of consent from the Scottish Environment Protection Agency.
- Consent to connect to public water mains or sewers from Scottish Water.
- A caravan site licence from the Council as Environmental Health Authority.

Advice on these may be included in the Appendix to your planning permission. You should read this Appendix carefully.

Consent from your feu superior may also be required, you should seek advice from your Solicitor on this point.
